

Rhyming Poetry

Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn and cauldron bubble.

Poison of a rattle snake;

Spikes on a garden rake.

The tongue of a mountain troll;

A goblin-used toilet roll.

A slimy, deadly electric eel;

The bright hot sparks from a Catherine-wheel.

A scale of a fire-breathing dragon;

The ale from a drunken-wizard's flagon.

The hair from a grizzly bear;

A smelly pair of underwear.

For more kick, add a scorpion sting;

Alongside a bald eagle's wing.

A pair of devil horns from the depths of hell;

Then add a stolen vicar's bronze church bell.

The potion will need a spider's leg;

Add one smelly, rotten egg.

Wait until the setting sun;

When the potion bubbles, it has then begun.

Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
