

The Dragon Queen

Far away in a great place called Easter, where only the richest people got what they needed, there lived a young kind girl named Alpha. She had hair like burning embers and skin as light as snow her eyes were like fire and ice. Alpha inhabited the warm, beautiful wild meadow and the cool shadowy trees with her fire coloured wolf Firehowler and woodland friends.

Every day Alpha went hunting, if she caught anything she would visit the bright, busy and happy market at the edge of the cool and emerald green forest and exchange it for a bit money.

On a sunny hot Sunday, Alpha was relaxing in the cool shade under the immense trees, thinking about her past. Suddenly a growling noise erupted from behind her, she spun around there was nothing. There it was, the noise, but this time it was weaker, maybe just maybe it was something wounded. Carefully Alpha scaled the towering tree near to her. Nothing. She would have to go on foot, Alpha walked cautiously towards the noise she gasped, she was speechless there was a monumental dragon laying there with a bloody snare wrapped around her leg. This dragon had scales like colourful stars flickering in the impossibly black sky, its eyes were as green as fresh emerald grass, but its leg was bloody and white from the snare, she grabbed her knife carelessly and slashed the wire trying to make a weak patch. She cared more about the dragon than her own safety. Eventually Alpha sliced through the snare, the dragon roared "you have saved the Queen of dragons I give you 1 wish, meet me here at midnight" then she flew off like a giant elegant butterfly into the sky.

Alpha thought deeply about it all day long, but couldn't decide, she asked her wolf called Firehowler, he howled "I would wish for you to find your parents," Sandstorm the squirrel squeaked, "I wish for you to have a humungiler (human) being friend." poor Alpha couldn't decide, suddenly it came to her! She bolted to the clearing and the majestic queen of dragons called "what do you wish for?"

"A friend who can speak to animals to help find my parents." "done!" the magnificent dragon roared kindly back. Alpha sat quietly looking at the silvery golden stars in the infinite blue sky "Alpha" called a voice like honey "we better get some sleep if you want to find your beloved parents tomorrow," "ok," Alpha replied, she sat there for a few more minutes and she swore that she had heard her parents.

To be continued.....

Jess (friend) where are we...